Notice of Print Version of the Before and After Disasters Guide

Information for State and Tribal Historic Preservation Leaders

As natural disasters increase in frequency and intensity, it's important that communities are aware of the federal aid available for protecting historic resources in times of crisis. To respond, several agencies have partnered to create a "Before and After Disasters" guidance document, which lays out the federal aid available to historic preservation leaders in the aftermath of a federally declared disaster.

Print versions will be arriving at your offices in the weeks of March 13th -20th.

The online version is available at Before and After Disasters: Guidance for State and Tribal Historic Preservation Leaders on Working with FEMA, NPS, and Other Federal Agencies.

This publication was developed with support from STLPG, NPS Cultural Resources GIS Facility, Office of Environmental Policy and Compliance (DOI), Heritage Emergency National Task Force (FEMA), Office of Environmental Planning and Historic Preservation (FEMA), National Association of Tribal Historic Preservation Officers, National Conference of State Historic Preservation Officers, the North Carolina Department of Natural and Cultural Resource, and the Colorado Office of Archaeology & Historic Preservation.
